Grounded in Research

Pam and Greg VanHorn, along with their fellow consultants and colleagues, are perpetual students and constantly reading and researching about education practices with principal leadership, collective efficacy, and leadership frameworks.

Those that they follow closely include: John Hattie, Robert Marzano, Michael Fullan, Karen Seashore-Louis, Roger Goddard, Wayne Hoy, Brian McNulty, and the Wallace Foundation.

About

VanHorn Educational Consultants bring decades of experience to help school districts do what they do best: improve student outcomes. By offering a personalized, collaborative approach to improving school systems, VanHorn Educational Consultants formulate and implement personalized professional development based on each districts' wants and needs.

VanHorn Educational Consultants help school districts utilize existing resources and funds to improve collaboration, leadership, and culture.

“ The VanHorns' work with us offered insightful, feasible recommendations based upon their review, to improve the program design. This allowed us to collect the appropriate data we needed for more in-depth analysis, demonstrate true impact of our program, and improve our probability of continued funding.”

— Sean Noe, Ph.D. Program Coordinator, Ohio Reading Corps

About the Founders and Chief Consultants

Pam VanHorn, Ph.D. and Greg VanHorn, Ph.D. are co-founders and chief consultants of VanHorn Educational Consultants. They have individually and collectively been embedded in Ohio education since the 1980s. In addition to their time in the classroom and leading schools and districts, both Pam and Greg have worked alongside principals and superintendents across the state on grant implementation, school improvement efforts, and program evaluation. VanHorn Education Consultants often call on the expertise of other education professionals, offering vast experience in K-12 education, based on a district's needs.

Even high-performing schools struggle with the capacity to take on the labor-intensive work with Title and IDEA funds for professional development and school improvement. By developing a systems approach to collaboration, districts, schools, and their leaders can help every student to reach education targets.

Work with VanHorn Educational Consultants

The best professional development occurs when there is a sustained, reciprocal relationship developed between consultants and the educators with whom they work.
